COMMENT OF THE DAY

ARAB BOYCOTT

ALTHOUGH no official announcement has been made there are indications that Israeli policy-makers are considering calling for a world-wide Jewish boycott of those firms which comply with the "No Trade With Israel" directives of the Arab League as a retaliatory measure for the economic campaign conducted against the country.

To Israel the Arab boycott has always meant a weapon intended to strangle the economy of the Jewish State, to perpetuate the economic and political tensions in the Middle East and to "soften" the ground for future military operations.

For years Israel has watched this growing machinery established by the Arab League to achieve these objectives and although Israeli experts and officials assert that the dangers of the boycott were more in their political and military implications the estimated direct losses as a result of the boycott are over HK$106.5 million a year, mainly through the necessity to purchase oil at high prices.

COMPLEX
BUT the boycott, which is a direct continuation of the Arab war against Israel in 1948-49, has now assumed the form of a complex operation, causing some concern in the international scene.

The Arab League countries have incorporated into their legislation severe penalties for contravention of the boycott, and foreign firms operating in Israel and in the Arab countries have in many cases been requested to liquidate their Israeli branches.

Foreign governments, too, have been subjected to various forms of intimidation, the most blatant of which was the attempt to prevent the West German Government from concluding its reparations agreement with Israel under threat of boycott.

COMBINED EFFORT
WEST Germany has been implementing her obligations under the agreement with no adverse consequences to her economic relations with the Arab countries and it is not beyond the bounds that a combined effort by other Western nations would result in the complete failure of the Arab "blackmail" tactics.

The "strategic cargo" blockade on Suez shipping, the blacklisting of foreign ships calling at Israeli ports, the ban on aircraft landing in Israel, are among the many other methods used in the campaign which has done nothing to lessen Middle East tension.

The Arab nations stand to gain precisely nothing from the boycott which is alienating Western sympathy. In fact, Israel has been forced to step up its development and generally stimulate self-reliance, but the political implications of some of the successes scored by the boycott still remain.

U.S. HELP WANTED IN MIDDLE EAST

Call For Better Deterrents Against War

Washington, Sept. 12. Israel today asked the United States to strengthen all available deterrents against aggression in the Middle East. Mr Abba Eban, the Israeli Ambassador, told reporters he had made this request at a conference with Mr John Foster Dulles, the Secretary of State, this morning.

Mr Eban identified the present deterrents as President Eisenhower's Middle East Doctrine, the President's statement of April, 1956, that the United States would assist within constitutional means, the victim of aggression in the Middle East, and other United States declarations.

Emphasised

Mr Eban, who conferred with Mr Dulles for an hour and a half, said: "I emphasised the importance of strengthening all available deterrents against aggression."

Mr Eban said that the central point of his talk with Mr Dulles "was the danger to security in the area arising from hostility to Israel on the part of neighbouring states, which, especially in the case of Egypt and Syria, are increasing their armaments at a very fast rate."

Mr Eban added: "I made it clear that the United States and other peace-loving powers should strongly oppose any aggression against the integrity or independence of Middle Eastern states including Israel."

He said he had presented his Government's view in the light of the Eisenhower Doctrine, the Presidential statement of 1956 and President Eisenhower's statement last Saturday, after a conference with Mr Dulles, that the United States would carry out its Middle East policy as needed.

Rearmament

His country viewed developments in the Middle East "in sombre terms," the Ambassador declared. The chief element was the headlong reararmament of Arab states, especially Egypt and Syria, and the accompanying increase in hostility towards Israel shown by these states.

Mr Eban said he had also expressed his Government's concern at the shipment of United States arms to Jordan and other Arab nations considered to be friendly towards the United States.

"I gave Mr Dulles a general picture of Israel today as a country pursuing its constructive purposes amidst the hostility and incitement surrounding it," he added.

"I made special reference to our efforts to strengthen our economy and our hope for continued co-operation with the United States in this respect."

Referring to United States arms shipments to Jordan, Mr Eban said that although they appeared to be smaller than the amount of Soviet arms sent to Egypt and Syria they were not an effective means of strengthening peace in the Middle East.

"The Western powers would be better advised to strengthen the social and economic situation in the Middle East," — Reuter.

MACMILLAN LUNCHES WITH THE QUEEN

London, Sept. 12. Mr Harold Macmillan, the Prime Minister, is believed to have told Queen Elizabeth details of his forthcoming government reshuffle when he lunched today with the Sovereign today at Buckingham Palace.

The Queen had travelled overnight from Balmoral, her Scottish residence, for the opening of the Inter-Parliamentary Union Conference.

The Prime Minister contemplated Government switch stems mainly from the Conservative Party's intention to invite Viscount Nuffield, now Minister of Education, to become Chairman of its National Organisation.

Politicians also think it possible Mr Macmillan may want to appoint a new Health Minister as Mr Dennis Vosper, present occupant of the post, has been ill for some time. — Reuter.

DULLES REBUKES GROMYKO

Washington, Sept. 12. The United States today accused the Soviet Foreign Minister, Andrei Gromyko, of engaging in "falsifications" in a seemingly deliberate effort to tear down the "bridges of understanding" that lead to world peace.

In an unusual personal rebuke to the top Russian diplomat, the State Department charged that Mr Gromyko followed the "old Molotov Line" in his recent "blustering" attacks on US policy in the Middle East. It said the "Molotov Line" had been repudiated by the Soviets themselves.

The Secretary of State, John Foster Dulles, followed up the Department's formal statement by telling representatives to the forthcoming United Nations General Assembly to be on the lookout for any Russian charges there.

The State Department charged in its statement that Mr Gromyko tried to "intimidate" America's allies and "frighten the free nations from taking action to reinforce their freedom." — United Press.

Labour Retains Gloucester

Gloucester, Sept. 13. The Labour Party opposition retained its Parliamentary seat in a by-election held here today with a much increased majority of 8,374.

Mr Jack Diamond, Labour, 52-year-old, chartered accountant who ran for Blackley, Manchester, from 1945 to 1951, polled 13,865 votes, against the Conservative candidate Francis Dashwood, 10,521, and 7,393 for the Liberal, Lieutenant-Colonel Patrick Fort-Phillips.

In the General Election there were only two candidates and Labour had a majority of 745. — Reuter.

DOWN SHE COMES

Hundreds of firemen were to be seen last Sunday fighting the fire which gutted the large Manchester department store of Paulden's — in centre of the city.

It was the city's biggest blaze since the blitz — and flying sparks caused more than 20 small fires in neighbouring streets.

NO WAY TO STOP PIRATING

Tokyo, Sept. 12. Japanese officials said today they had no way of stopping Japanese hosiery manufacturers from copying British packaging designs.

Officials at the Ministry of International Trade and Industry agreed that only the Patent Bureau could act on the charges by D. Byford & Co., of Leicester, England, that Japanese firms have been "pirating" its package designs.

"Determination in such cases rests with the Patent Bureau," Jibei Tanaka of the Trade Ministry said. He said the Bureau can start investigations and determine whether a designer trade mark has been pirated but only after an official complaint is lodged.

But the Patent Bureau said few packaging designs are registered with it, and unless such registrations are made, "it is impossible for the Bureau to do anything about such charges." — United Press.

SEX MANIAC CONFESSES TO STRANGLING BOY

London, Sept. 12. In a statement read in court today, 31-year-old Horace Henry Edwards confessed to the murder on August 10 of seven-year-old Allan Warren, who was found strangled on some waste ground.

As Edwards, who gave a lengthy description of the incident in his statement, left the court charged with murder, his mother cried out: "My God, punish you for this!"

Allan Warren disappeared from his parent's car on August 10 in London suburb when they left him briefly to buy him an orange in a neighbouring public house.

SHIVERING FIT

In his statement, read to the court by the prosecutor, Edwards said he was coming out of another public house when "all of a sudden I had a shivering fit come over me."

He saw Allan in the car, he said, and invited the child to come and help him mend his motor-bicycle. Edwards said he took the child by the hand and led him into a lane.

Little Allan said: "I hope you are not going to play about." Edwards said he lost his head, the child started screaming, and Edwards said he seized him by the throat and strangled him.

Edwards said he did not want to kill the child, but just to quieten him, and was in despair when he found the boy was dead. He removed the child's clothes and took them home with him.

ASSAULTED HIM

A week later, Edwards said in his confession, he accosted another small boy, took him home and sexually assaulted him. This he had not done to Allan.

Edwards then decided, he said, to kill himself and opened the taps of the gas stove while the boy lay on the floor unconscious. At this moment, Edwards' mother came home and, anxious at the locked door and the smell of gas, called the police who broke the door down and took Edwards in charge.

He had left a note saying that he was haunted by the memory of little Allan. He also left a teddy-bear as a present for a small niece.

Edwards was committed for trial for murder at the Old Bailey criminal court next month. — France-Press.

FRANCE SCOFFS AT SOVIET CLAIM

United Nations, Sept. 12. France called on the General Assembly today for new efforts to compel the withdrawal of Russian troops from Hungary and to arrange free elections in that country.

Gulianne Georges-Picot of France, reaffirming his Government's support for the pending 37-power resolution condemning Russian repression of the Hungarian revolt, scoffed at the Soviet claim that the uprising was a "reactionary" conspiracy.

"Soviet propaganda, as usual, presents the Hungarian revolution as a plot," he said. "For many years now, the Soviet Union has disguised production statements or crises or consumption difficulties that it has been unable to overcome, and has cried out in loud tones ... of plots and spectacular machinations."

"This has become such a habit that the propensity for imagining the existence of plots might be taken as an index of the condition of a country."

OUR CONCERN

M. Georges-Picot said France's stand was "dictated by our concern for the interests of the Hungarian people."

"The sincere and heartfelt desire of the French is that the wishes of the Hungarian people be taken into account; that the resolutions of the General Assembly be implemented; especially that police repression cease; that free elections be organized, for without them it would be vain to hope for any real amelioration of the lot of the people of Hungary," he said.

"This is not only our desire, this is also the objective sought in the draft resolution before the General Assembly." — United Press.

PROTEST NOTE RECEIVED

London, Sept. 12. A second note of protest from the Peking Government over the eviction of a number of Chinese residents and unlawful settlers from certain Kowloon areas was received by the British Government this morning, an official source said today.

The note was handed to the British Charges d'Affaires in Peking last Tuesday, as previously reported by the New China News Agency. The text of the Chinese protest is now "being studied" at the Foreign Office. — France-Press.

FIFTEEN KILLED IN CRASH

Vienna, Sept. 12. At least 15 persons were killed and 26 others mortally seriously injured in a train crash in Czechoslovakia last night, Radio Prague announced tonight.

The broadcast said the disaster occurred at the village of Bratky, near Prostějov, central Moravia, when a passenger train crashed at full speed into the rear of a stationary freight train.

Several cars were completely destroyed in the crash, it said, adding that police and military teams were working all night to rescue the victims.

The injured passengers were taken to the hospitals of Olomouc and Prostějov, it said. — United Press.

'BATTLE OF LOVE' AGAINST USN

Mantle, Sept. 12. Cynthia Garcia de Guzman said today she and her American sailor husband were grimly determined to fight their "battle of love" against the United States Navy.

Apprentice Seaman Paul S. Nelson Jr., 19, of St Paul, Minn., had been sentenced by a reviewing board to "disbarment" for marrying Cynthia, a Filipino, early this year without Navy permission.

"It's unfair," the 24-year-old daughter of a Minister told United Press. "I feel very sick about the whole thing. I don't know what to say. It just isn't justice at all."

She said Paul is arriving in this US Naval Reservation soon for a rehearsing on the case after a reviewing board had "disapproved" findings of a special court martial which convicted Nelson on May 29 for "violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice."

Paul and I are determined to see this fight through," Cynthia said. "we will fight this battle of love to the finish." She said she and Paul had high hopes of emerging victorious not only for their sake but also for "several Filipino girls in the same predicament as having married American sailors." — United Press.

TUNISIANS ASK FRENCH TO QUIT ONE AREA

Get Out Or We'll Get You Out Threat

Tunis, Sept. 12.

President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia said today his government had asked the French to evacuate Gafsa, one of seven points at which Tunisia recently agreed that France should continue to station troops for the time being.

"We are awaiting the French reply. If this reply should be delayed we have sufficient means to speed up the evacuation," he said in a speech recorded for broadcasting. He said the Tunisian request had been made to the French yesterday. He added that M. Mongiellum, Tunisian Ambassador in Washington, saw Mr. Dag Hammarskjöld, Secretary-General of the United Nations yesterday to inform him of Franco-Tunisian tension arising by French "incursions" into Tunisia.

M. Bourguiba said the report to Mr. Hammarskjöld was a first step which precedes a second one, the latter, official tabling of a complaint if the situation does not improve. He said M. Mongiellum was seeing Mr. John Foster Dulles, United States Secretary of State, to tell him that by refusing arms to Tunisia in order not to annoy the French, the United States, Italy, Belgium and other Western countries are taking their share of responsibility for the aggressions of which Tunisia is the object. "If this solidarity in the plot is maintained, Tunisia and its leaders will be constrained to reconsider their position. When Tunisia chose to place itself within the framework of the West, that choice was justified by moral and material advantages. If that choice leads in fact only to humiliations and indignities, the country is exposed to disturbances and anarchy. How can we justify our remaining in the Western camp if it does not protect us from these factors?"

"At the moment when we are witnessing a vast propaganda effort by the other camp, which, by its votes in the United Nations and by assistance and credits widely dispensed, boasts of defending the sovereignty of peoples, how can minds not be disturbed?" M. Bourguiba said.

Massey-Harris Decides Against Standard Deal

Conventry, Sept. 12. The directors of Massey-Harris-Ferguson announce that they have decided not to proceed with their offer for the ordinary stock of the Standard Motor Company.

They added that the directors of Standard were in agreement. The announcement stated that since the offer was first proposed there had been a material drop in the price of Massey-Harris-Ferguson shares and this had materially altered the basis of the terms of the proposed offer.

As the directors had found themselves unable to improve their offer they had decided not to proceed with the formal offer. Massey-Harris-Ferguson and Standard would, of course, continue to co-operate closely as in the past, the announcement added. — China Mail Special.

Go Ahead Signal For New Project

London, Sept. 12. The "go ahead" was given today for the building of the world's largest nuclear power station, with a net electrical output of 500,000 kilowatts, at Hinkley Point, on the Somerset coast.

Hinkley Point marks a new stage in Britain's advance in the use of atomic energy for peaceful purposes. Its output will be almost seven times that of the world's first nuclear power station, Calder Hall, which was opened less than a year ago.

It will be the sixth of Britain's nuclear power stations either built or under construction, and the fourth for the public supply of electricity. The atomic energy authority's two nuclear power stations are mainly for experimental purposes.

Hinkley Point has been described as demonstrating again "the tremendous potential for development in the Calder type of design and the ability of British engineering to lead the world in this field."

Two Reactors

It will have two reactors of the gas-cooled graphite-moderated type fuelled by natural uranium.

The Central Electricity Authority today awarded the contract for the Hinkley Point station to the English Electric Company in association with Babcock and Wilcox Limited and Taylor Woodrow Limited.

The station is scheduled to come into operation by 1962 and will cost 200 million.

It is estimated that about 300 people will be required to operate the station, which compares favourably with conventional power stations.—China Mail Special.

REBEL LEADER'S RADIO SEIZED

Havana, Sept. 12. Police today seized rebel leader Fidel Castro's radio station in suburban Mariano, 700 miles from the Sierra Maestra region in southeastern Cuba where it was supposedly located.

A second transmitter, located in nearby Cumanayagua, had been moved before the arrival of police.

Broadcasts from this transmitter were used by rebel spokesmen in the United States, principally in Miami, Florida, as the basis for propaganda statements which they said came "direct from Castro" in his mountain hideout.

An amateur radio operator, Nilo Diaz Trezada, was captured and confessed he was one of the two's two announcers. The second announcer, Cesar Blanco Gutierrez, escaped. It was from the latter's home that the second transmitter had been removed.

In suburban Santos Suarez, meanwhile, 26-year-old Francisco Cardona Oria was gravely injured when a time bomb he was carrying strapped to his belt under his coat blew up before he could get rid of it. Police said he had little chance of living.—United Press.

Cold Stones

London, Sept. 12. Russian scientists have found "very large" diamond fields in the Yakutia area of the Arctic, Moscow Radio said tonight. It said an expedition of the Leningrad Institute of Arctic Geology spent five months in the area, reaching by plane and helicopter outlying regions of the Arctic where no one has ever lived or journeyed.—China Mail Special.

OUTBREAK OF MENTAL DERANGEMENT PUZZLES JAPANESE DOCTORS MYSTERY ILLNESS HITS PARATROOPS

Commander Calls Halt To Jump Exercises

Tokyo, Sept. 12.

An outbreak of mental derangement cases among Japanese paratroopers had Japanese military leaders re-studying today the training of their airborne force.

Japanese newspaper reports that the Commander of the 101st Airborne Battalion, Japan's only paratrooper unit, has ordered suspension of jump exercises could not be confirmed immediately.

But officials at the National Defence Agency said training had been "curtailed."

The Defence Agency also set up a special committee on Wednesday to review the training and equipment of the airborne soldiers.

'Half Crazy'

Of almost 700 men in the Air Force, a total of 49 were reported to be suffering from mental derangement.

Eighteen of the men are receiving attention at the Defence Force Central Hospital. Three of the most serious cases have been diagnosed as suffering from schizophrenia. The Kyodo News Agency reported that politically these patients were deranged and got into a state "close to being half crazy."

Doctors were quoted as saying, "As long as we don't discover the cause there is danger they may never be cured."

Head Bumps

The 15 other hospital cases complain constantly of headaches which at times become very severe. They sometimes go into paroxysms of anger and at other times become depressed.

All 48 were reported to have hit their heads severely in parachute jumps at one time or another.—United Press.

THE HON. YANG TERAMAT MULIA TUNKU ABDUL RAHMAN PUTRA

Warmth Not Words For Malaya

TO meet Tunku Abdul Rahman is like drinking ale from a Ming cup. The vessel is Oriental; the contents as English as teatime.

Eminent lawyer-politician Lord Ogmore who knows the Tunku well, summed up on him as — "that unusual combination, a staunch Anglophile and a staunch nationalist."

As first Prime Minister of newly-independent Malaya, Tunku Abdul Rahman will be served well by this exotic mixture of character. For it singles him out as one of the very few men truly able to act as a link between the West and the nascent nations of the East.

Other Eastern statesmen have been similarly hailed. But too often their Westernness is that of chance and conference tables.

Nobody could say that about Tunku Abdul Rahman. His Englishness is the deep-rooted instinctive kind of the football terrace, and the greyhound stadiums.

By SIMON KAVANAUGH

Indeed, his explanation for failing law exams at London's Inner Temple was that he had spent too much time at dog and horse races.

At home in Malaya he is as human and down-to-earth. And this, curiously, is even more remarkable than his Englishness. For he is of royal stock. His brother is the Sultan of Kedah, and his title Tunku means "prince".

To put himself truly in touch with the ordinary men and women of Malaya meant overcoming generations of ingrained autocracy. Yet now he can talk to his Malay peasants with a sincere homeliness and with complete absence of patronage.

Cambridge

Traces of the autocrat sometimes show, nevertheless. The Tunku, for instance, does not like to be criticised. Indeed, he is so convinced of his rightness for Malaya that he is inclined to look on political opponents as saboteurs. But what intolerance there is in his nature is directed invariably at those strong enough to look out for themselves.

Much of his homeliness stems from his student days at Cambridge (he went there in the 'twenties on a state scholarship, failed one history exam because he forgot to write it). There he became a football fan. And there are few more democratic games than soccer.

Every day, whenever he comes to London, he usually manages to fit in visits to White Hart Lane, Stamford Bridge or Highbury Stadium where he rubs shoulders with the ordinary people of England and roots for his favourites.

It is this humanity which has got him where he is now. For as an orator he is an indifferent performer and his preference for committee work rather than public appearances once earned him the tag "Alcega of the East". It was the sincere warmth of the man that brought the voters rallying to his banner and won for him the general election of 1955.

There are these who say that this very warmth is what will prevent him ever being a really great man. He is too apt, they say, to let comparatively trivial human problems interrupt greater things.

He tried for years, for instance, to discover the man who had been his first tutor at Cambridge. When eventually he did discover the man's widow he postponed a return visit to Malaya, went off to look over old days at Cambridge and bought his old tutor's daughter a motor scooter, although he is anything but a wealthy man.

Then there was the time he turned his Social Welfare Department onto the job of helping a Royal Air Force sergeant to find his Malay wife who had left him and was believed to be working as a waitress in Eastern Malaya.

But Tunku Abdul Rahman is no sloppy sentimentalist. No one knows this better than his hotel enemy 38-year-old Chin Peng, leader of Malaya's Communist terrorists. Twice the terrorist chief has tried to trap the Tunku into a negotiated peace. Each attempt has foundered against the Tunku's unshakable resolve that he will accept only unconditional surrender from the Red gangs.

Anti-Red

Chin Peng fears and hates Malaya's new leader. For it was the Tunku who turned the anti-terrorist campaign from a British war into a people's war. To do this he stomped the country by helicopter shaking the people out of their apathy and explaining why they had to throw their weight behind the campaign against the Reds.

The Tunku is probably the most pro-British of Asian statesmen. Although a Muslim he did not join his voice to the angry chorus of criticism of British action against Suez, despite strong pressure from within his own party. He is on record as referring to "the benevolent rule of the British". And again of British rule he has said: "We who have lived under it have all been happy. This is a form of rule I should like to see continue in independent Malaya."

But even Chin Peng has had to admit that Tunku Abdul Rahman is no "running dog of the British". His Anglophilia is anything but blind.

Tunku Abdul Rahman's family life is typical of that of a man who lives quietly in Kuala Lumpur with his wife and two adopted children.

One of the children is the daughter of Chinese Ieper parents.

The Earnest

This child is a living symbol to the people of Malaya of what Tunku Abdul Rahman strives to achieve. He knows the tenaciousness between local Chinese and native Malaya. He knows too that superstitious fear stands in the way of progress against leprosy. The girl is the earnest of his belief that both fears can be overcome.

In the field of politics he has proved, too, that there can be racial unity in Malaya, for he rose to power as head of the "Triple Alliance", a party combining the three main races of Malaya, the Chinese, Chinese and Indians.

Ahead of Tunku Abdul Rahman lies the tough task of keeping the three peoples together and at the same time crushing Communism.

He knows that both objectives must be achieved if Malaya is to prosper as a sovereign nation.

EXPERIMENTS with a mouse's whiskers and the woolly coat of a lamb have produced the most promising news yet for bald-headed men.

They have shown that a food substance, cysteine, is rapidly absorbed by hair roots when it is injected into the bloodstream.

And cysteine is known to be one of the main ingredients of growing human hair.

Dr M. L. Ryder of Leeds described his experiments to 250 doctors and scientists at the conference on hair-growth in London.

He injected animals with cysteine made radioactive so that it could be traced in the body with an atom-ray detector.

He found that a mouse's whiskers and a lamb's wool are

The ointment

Dr Geoffrey Bourne, a London hospital scientist, said: "Other experiments have proved that substances like cysteine are absorbed by the hair if they are rubbed on the skin in ointment form."

"There is no PROOF that cysteine will rejuvenate hair but this exciting news suggests we are really beginning to get somewhere."

"Within about five years we may have a way of preventing baldness and causing new hair to sprout," he said.

Will Onassis quit Monte Carlo?

THE FABULOUS CASINO HAS DISILLUSIONED HIM

MR Aristotle Onassis, the Greek tanker owner, would now like to sell out his controlling interest in the Monte Carlo Casino. The entire venture on which he staked some remarkably naive hopes has turned sour and become a tiresome irritant.

Among the hopes which have been dashed was that of acquiring the Monegasque flag for his tankers, which, of course, the French would never permit, and of acquiring an influence over Prince Ranier, whose importance he overestimated.

But the whole climate in Monte Carlo seems inimical to the idea of using it as a business headquarters for his fleet.

Here his business and private life is a public spectacle played out against a background of endless banquets. It says a lot for his stamina and good humour that he survives it.

The other day while he was lunching at the Beach Club he became involved in a scene over a business deal with an irate American who towered over him and looked as though he was about to pick him up and throw him into the blue Mediterranean.

THE American was Governor Averell Harriman's son-in-law, who announced himself as Stanley Grafton Mortimer Junior.

He had flown over to clinch a sale on 14 Douglas DC 6's for Mr Onassis's Greek air lines.

Mr Onassis, doubted whether Mortimer could deliver them by lead with champagne charged extra) the orchestra played over and over again a charming Greek song which is apparently a current favourite of Mr Onassis. It made one wonder whether they would not soon consider it appropriate to end an evening with the Greek National Anthem.

Gambling at the casino recently has been very heavy—and so has the tipping. Mr Natchez won £20,000 in a burst at chemin de fer and passed over a £500 chip as a tip for the croupiers.

His bill for his party at the gala was £550, on which he paid a £100 tip.

NO TRIAL

CONSTANTINE LIAMBEY, the Greek-born financier, who was the central figure in Monaco's biggest post-war scandal when the bank which he controlled crashed, died recently in Monte Carlo while on bail awaiting trial.

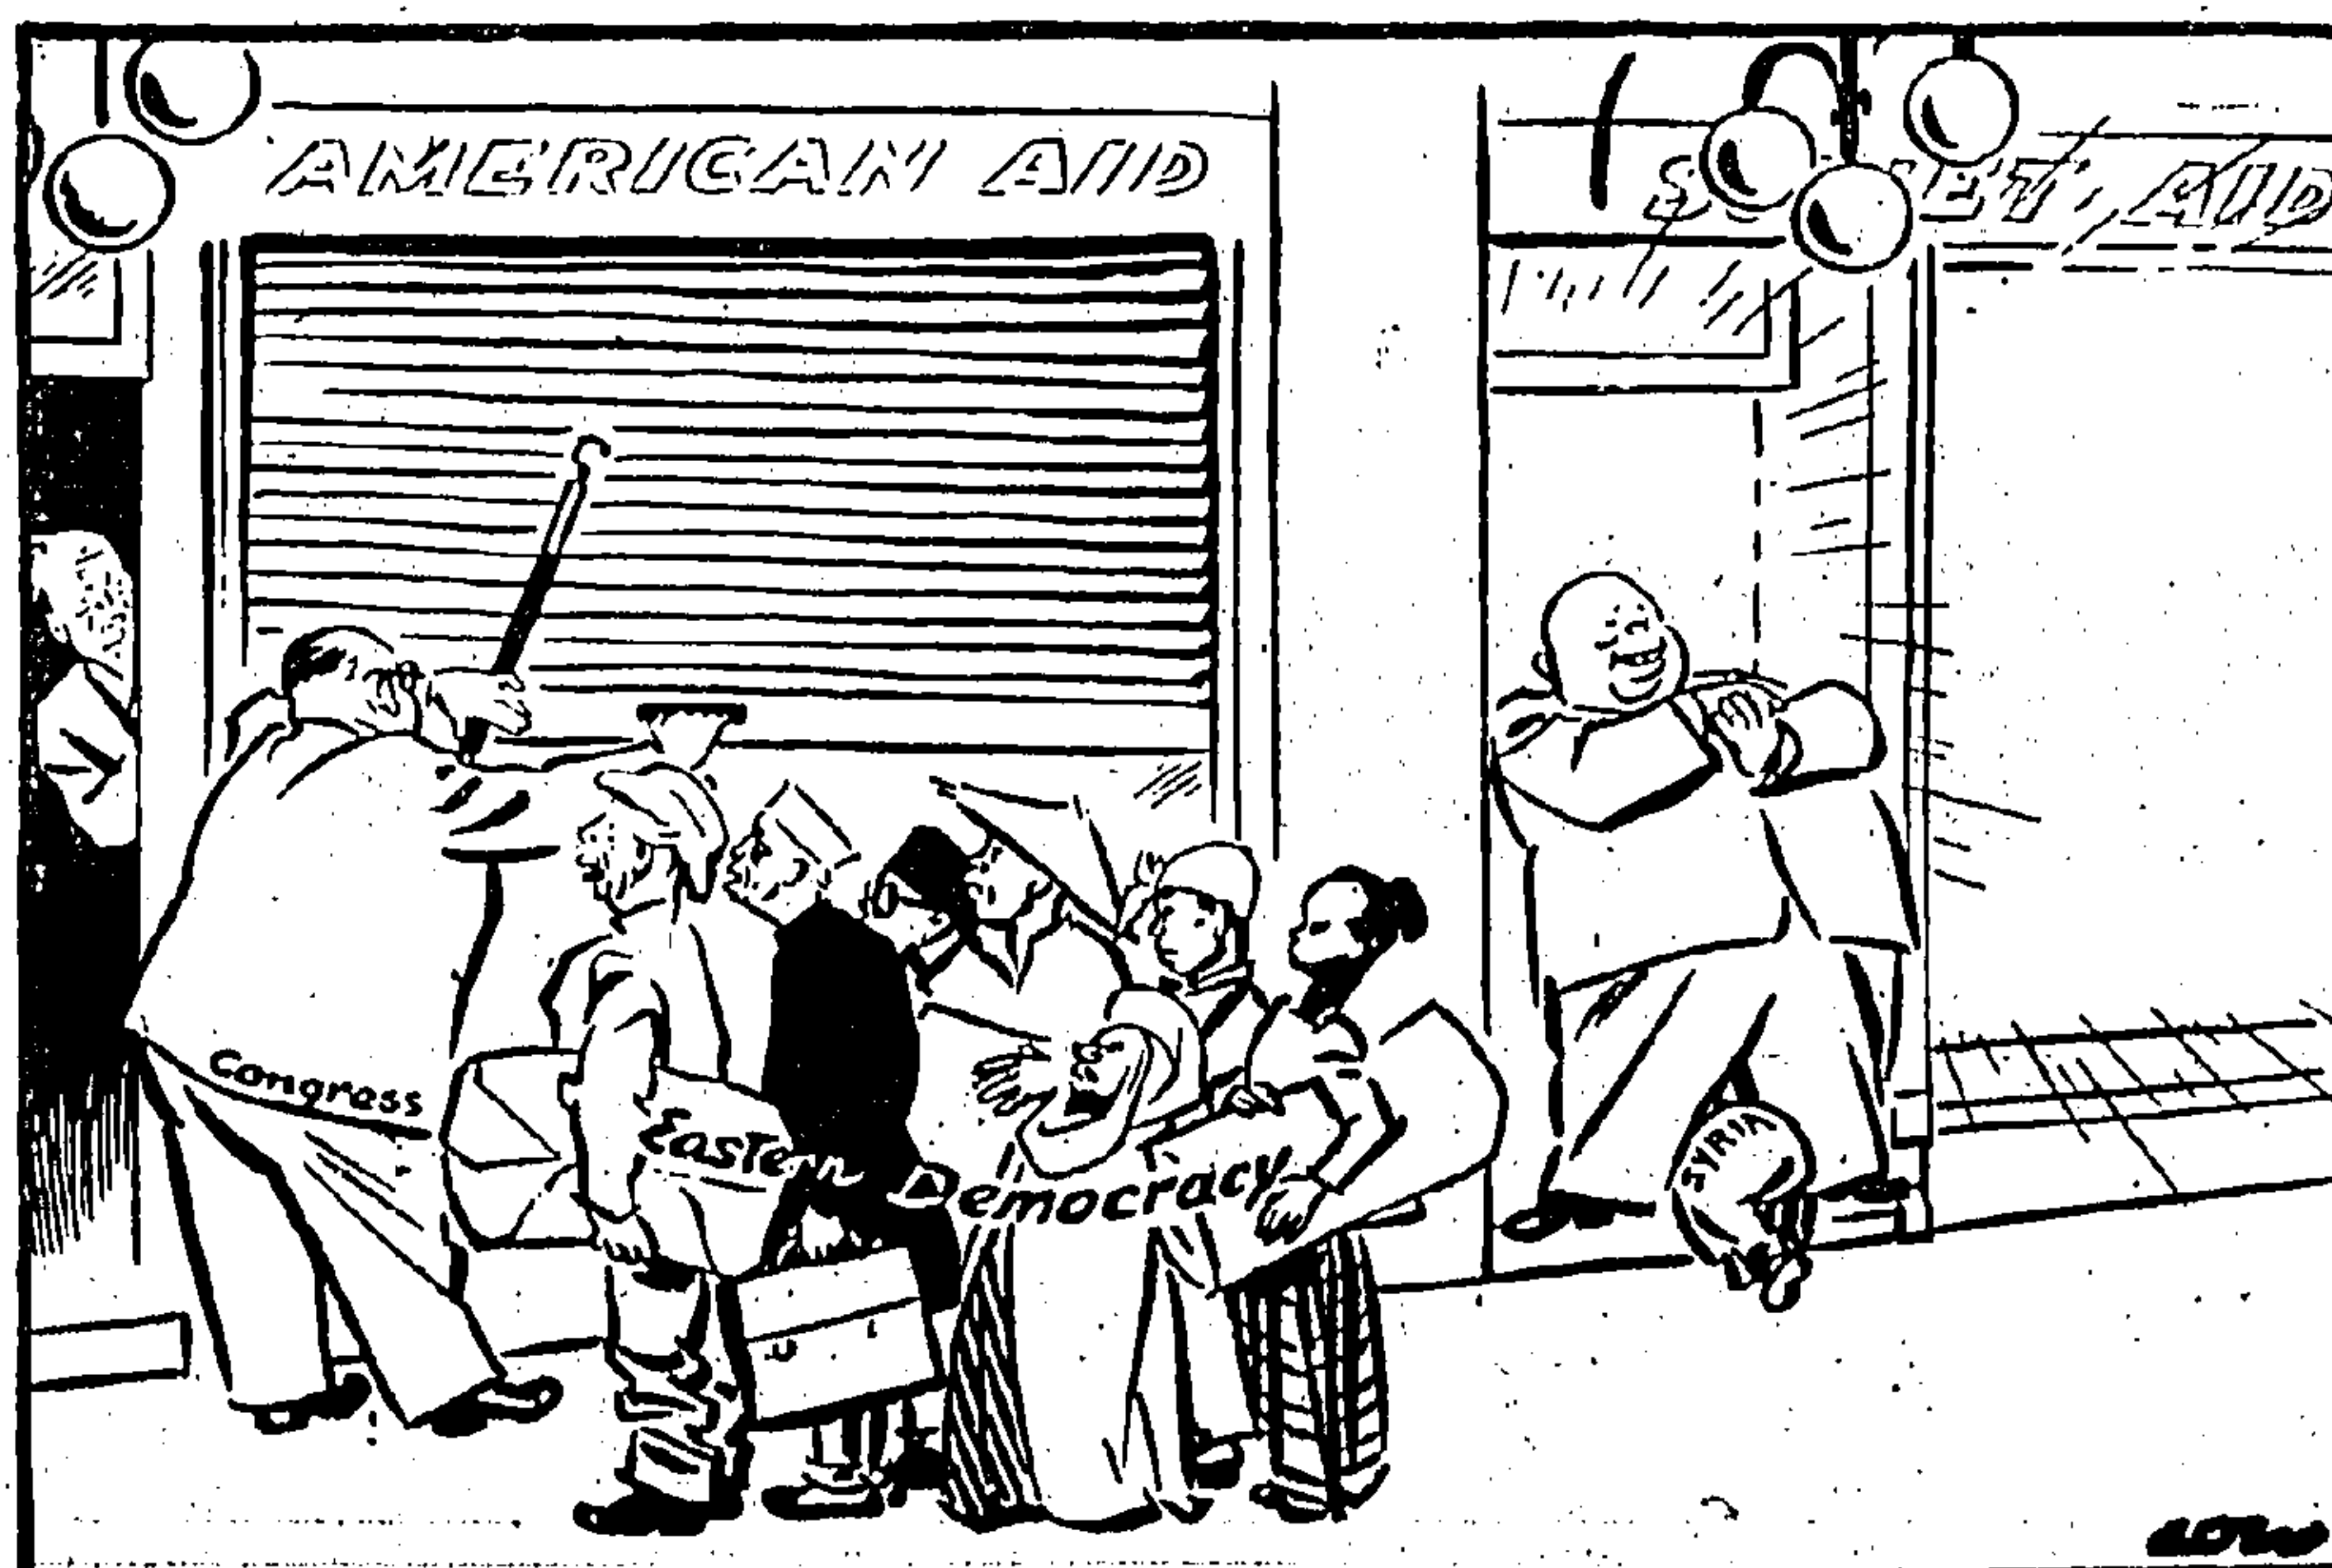

Without wishing to be cynical it must be reported that there was an almost audible sigh of relief at the news.

No trial, no names, no pack drill.

In the view of the many people who regarded the coming trial with apprehension, it should be stressed that his death was a natural one.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

THE late Aga Khan's choice of his grandson as his successor is considered as brilliant here, for the flattering reason, that he is half-English.

IF the seductive prospect of dozens of news-flashes all day long fails to overcome sales-resistance, the U.S.C. may have to give the public still more of what it is at last discovering it doesn't want.

Advertisement—flushes all through the night may be the answer. "You Can't Afford Sleep, in Case You Miss Something." A siren fitted to the radio, and timed to wait four times an hour, will wake those who, exhausted by 12 or 14 hours' listening, are trying to sleep. No conscientious listener could object to being awakened at 3.15 a.m. to hear about soap, or to be told that a girl cricketer has made nine runs. By the time millions are sick of television, we shall be faced with the appalling prospect of a return to the old idea of families providing their own amusements in their homes.

Twenty Years of Upnor

I thought the 'cello came in too soon.

The hairy postman

HAIR is sprouting from the postman to the great satisfaction of the young of the victim. Meanwhile, a look-out man or assistant is watching the bald head, which so far shows no signs of reforestation.

"The rapidity of the growth takes one's breath away," murmured Strabismus, contemplating the spread of whiskers on the postman's head. "It takes time, away all right," said the postman from behind a moustache which almost covered his mouth. Later, speaking through the undergrowth, and trying to keep his spirits up, he said: "Is there a barber in the house? If there is, tell him to sharpen his scythe. And ring up the lumbermen, in case this goes on." Strabismus, busy with a graph, noted down a couple of words, and sprang up on the postman's neck.

I only want to help

I READ in a paper that the best cure for strain and anxiety is to focus the attention mentally on the two corners of the ceiling behind.

It is helpful to look at each corner first over the respective shoulder." May I add that by looking at each corner first over the other shoulder (left-hand corner over right-hand shoulder and vice versa) you can exercise the neck muscles while resting the nerves? Then there is the method of counting. On the principle that a pain in the leg takes the mind off a pain in the arm, you balance a jar, filled with hot glue, on your head. You will worry so much about spilling it that you will forget to worry about anything else.

North proceeded to overbid slightly by his immediate bid in hearts. He probably should have passed three notrump but he was still enthralled by his singleton ace of hearts and jumped to five clubs.

South's six club bid was sound duplicate tactics. If he couldn't play notrump, he wanted to gamble for a slam and was successful.

WORLD CUP Northern Ireland To Meet Italy On Dec. 4

Rome, Sept. 12. The Italian Football Federation announced today that the return World Cup match between Italy and Northern Ireland would be played in Belfast on Wednesday, December 4.

The first match, in Rome on April 25, was won by Italy 1-0. The federation said they had been unable to accept the date proposed by Northern Ireland—December 7—because of the difficulty of finding Italian players from their own club engagements.

It was also announced that the return World Cup match between Italy and Northern Ireland would be held in Milan on December 22—China Mail Special.

AMERICAN AMATEUR GOLF TOURNAMENT Even Par Rounds By Doctor

Brookline, Sept. 12. Dr. Frank (Bud) Taylor, a 40-year-old California dentist, and a trio of youngsters—Mason Rudolph, Hillman Robbins and Rex Baxter—stroked their way into the semi-finals of the US Amateur Golf Championship today.

Taylor played even par golf through two rounds as he eliminated Jim Tom Blair two up and then went out to down Gene Andrews two up.

That sent him into tomorrow's 36-hole semi-finals against Pfc. Mason Rudolph, 23. In the other half of the draw it will be Hillman Robbins, 25, against 21-year-old Rex Baxter, the NCAA Champion from the University of Houston.

All four semi-finalists are Walker Cuppers.

Rudolph bounced into the semi-finals against Taylor by beating Larry Cook of Wrightsville Beach 4 and 3, and then disposing of Dick Yost 1 up in 19 holes.

Robbins beat Tim Holland one up, and then eliminated veteran Chapman, the 1940 champion, 3 and 1. Baxter was carried to the 21st hole before he subdued his University of Houston room mate, 19-year-old Phil Rodgers, in the quarter-finals. Earlier he had ousted Alex Sott 5 and 3.—United Press.

GIANTS WILL FALL HEIR TO THIS Greatest Talent Reservoir Of Baseball Stars On The Pacific Coast Says HAL WOOD

San Francisco. The New York Giants are expected to fall heir to the greatest talent reservoir in the history of Major League baseball when they move to San Francisco for the 1958 National League campaign. That is because the Giants will be right on the ground to tap the nation's most fertile producer of big-time baseball stars—the Pacific Coast.

A survey of Major League rosters today shows that approximately 20 per cent of the 400 players come from states bordering the Pacific.

While the other teams still will have their existing scouting system in operation in California, Oregon and Washington, the Giants are expected to be in a fine bargaining position in the races to obtain the top talent because the youngsters prefer to play with the club that is closest to home. In fact, many Major Leaguers, near the end of their string, quit the Majors a year or two early, playing in the Pacific Coast League to be able to spend more time near their homes.

DOZENS OF STARS

From San Francisco alone dozens of stars have gone to the Majors, including such names as Ping Bodie, Dolph Camilli, Joe Cronin, Frank Crosetti, Babe Dahlgren, the Dimaggio brothers, Bob Elliott, Harry Helms, Jackie Jensen, Eddie Joost, Walt Judnich, Willie Kamm, George Kelly, Mark Koenig, Tony Lozerri, Bill Lange, Duffy Lewis, Swede Risberg, Helme Sand, Lefty O'Doul, Babe Pirelli, Charlie Silvera, Gusie Suhr, Oscar Vitt, Walter Mails and many others.

If the Giants are able to corner the local bush league talent, developed in leagues that play 12 months of the year, they could set up a Pennington dynasty that could compare with the New York Yankees.

Down through the years the Yankees have been great users of West Coast talent and they always have at least a half dozen from this area (nine at the start of this season) on their squad—plus Manager Casey Stengel, from Glendale, California.

The Giants, on the other hand, have nibbled sparingly at the West Coast talent reservoir. But if they dig right in, they may gain a monopoly on players from a state that has a 13,000,000 population now and will have 20,000,000 by 1970.

This little item may have been overlooked by some of the other club owners who pondered the chances of success in the West.

PROPERTY OWNER

Property owner Wayne Poulsen charged the State of California with "pure socialism" in attempting to "grab" his land for the 1950 Winter Olympic Games.

The airlines pilot charged that the state is planning to expropriate the right of eminent domain to take some 42 acres from him at a price of about $2,000 per acre—when he could get "at least" $10,000 an acre.

Poulsen's figures vary considerably from those released by the California Olympic Commission as he arrives at entirely different conclusions.

"I offered to give the Olympic Commission the use of my land for nothing for the Winter Games," said Poulsen. "The land included area for the ski jump outlet, flood control, etc. And we even offered to construct a 500-acre parking lot and turn it over to them." "Then they decided they had to buy all this land, so the state could go into the ski business to get some of the money back. They will be in competition with private business." "It is pure socialism."

The Olympic Commission reported that Poulsen demanded $440,000 for 42 acres of land in the valley. The breakdown was $245,000 for the sale of 15 acres of land and easements on another 21 acres plus $195,000 more for a 30-year lease on six acres.

The state's offer would give Poulsen $58,020 for the acreage and easements, plus $44,580 for the six-acre lease.

"Do you know that they offered $10 a year for 80 years on a 10-acre plot of land?" the outraged owner declared, "this means about 3 1/4 cents per acre per year! The taxes on the land come to $1.12 per acre alone!"

Asked what the value of the land came to, he replied: "We can sell it retail for $14,000 an acre. If we sell it wholesale to a developer, we can get about $10,000 an acre for it."

TIME AND MONEY

"We have spent a lot of time and money making our own surveys for water control, sewage disposal, etc. But the Olympic Commission doesn't take that into consideration when making us an offer."

Poulsen pointed out that he believes the state is "taking the prime land" from his 1,240 acres which he paid $50,000 for in 1950.

"There is a piece of land they want from me, 2.87 acres, on which they propose to construct a $220,000 building. They offered to pay me $75 per year for this on a 30-year lease. We asked $400 per year. They will have a tremendous income from that building."

Poulsen plans to fight the state on its condemnation proceedings, right through all the courts. If he is successful, his battle could hold up construction on the Olympic Games site.—United Press.

DURING the past few days, one of the largest local property deals reported for some time has been closed. It involves the sale of the property occupied by the Old Jockey Club stables at the Causeway Bay Farm, and adjoining the Polo Grounds, to the Metropolitan Land and Building company. The price has not been disclosed. The property totals just under 90,000 square feet and has a frontage of 374 feet on the Causeway Bay Road.

EUROPEANS are taking the places of Chinese as dining-room stewards on board the vessels of the American Dollar Line (New President Line). The change is in compliance with the requirements of the Jones-White Act that all officers and two-thirds of the crew of mail contract ships shall be American citizens.

AN UGLY incident occurred on a Nanjing Road in the heart of the International settlement (of Shanghai) last night in which two truckloads of Japanese Marines and a Riot Squad, including European Officers from Central Police headquarters came to grips. The Japanese naval trucks were clearing an intersection and attempted to turn against the traffic signal. A Sikh policeman on duty at the spot shouted to the driver of the naval lorry to stop and the man applied his brakes and swerved into the curb almost hitting a Chinese tramway.

The Chinese turned upon the lorry-load of sober-faced blue-jackets and poured upon them a torrent of abuse. Four leaped from the truck and seized the coolie and bundled him into the truck. A furious crowd gathered around the truck as the Sikh policeman tried to get the lorry to stop and threatened to use force to get the coolie back. At this stage a riot was turned up and European officers, grim and unharmed, flung their way through the Chinese mob and reached the side of the lone constable in the midst of the turmoil. The Chinese greaser was rescued and a European officer was struck in the face during the melee.

Grave injuries were sustained by Mr. C. M. da Silva, of 23 Jordan Road yesterday morning when he was thrown from a motor cycle when the machine ran over the bank along the Taiipo Road, near the 4 1/2 mile mark. He sustained a fractured skull and was removed to Kowloon Hospital in a serious condition.

THE Hongkong Nudist Society exists in reality as well as in name and members indulge in nudist outings over the weekends. Members hold outings and bask in the sun and swim in rivers and without a stitch of clothing. The sect has held at least two outings since its organization and others are planned. It is claimed that the Society has a membership of over 40, which includes several women, both European and Chinese. Of the men it is said that the majority are Chinese, Russian and Portuguese, although some Britishers have signed up. Women attended the first excursion, it is reported, but it is quite definite that no women attended the outing on Sunday last. It was later learned they missed the train. BIRDS EYE'S COMMENT: The local nudists are holding outings; but they seem to be getting their innings.

CORRUPTION CASE ADJOURNED

Defence Objects To Evidence By Prosecution

A strong objection to the Prosecution's leading evidence which allegedly tended to show the guilt of the accused of other offences other than the ones before the Court was raised by Mr D'Alton, Defence Counsel in a corruption case, involving two Police constables before Judge K. R. Macfee at the Victoria District Court this morning.

Mr D'Alton said the evidence given by Mrs Keung Chi-ching on the second incident in regard to an alleged abortion had no connection with the charge of corruption. There was nothing to indicate that any sum of money had been demanded or collected from Keung as an inducement or reward to refrain from carrying out the accused's duties as Police officers, he said.

He continued that the Prosecution must not introduce evidence to show that the accused was guilty of an offence other than as charged unless and until such evidence falls within certain specified exceptions.

After further submission on this point, Judge Macfee granted an adjournment for Crown Counsel to appear to answer the Defence submission. The adjournment was requested by Chief Insp. W. Apps, who prosecuted in the case, assisted by Det. Sub-Inspector D. G. McNeil.

Accused

The accused are Hui Chi-shuen, 23, and Ko Pun-kit, 27, who are alleged to have solicited and received money from a married woman, Keung Chi-ching, as a reward for forbearing to carry out their duties in respect of three abortions allegedly committed by Keung.

They are represented by Mr V. L. J. D'Alton, instructed by P. L. Lam and Co. Testifying Mrs Keung Chi-ching, said that in December, last year, the accused told her that a certain woman would see her for treatment.

On the following day, the second accused brought a woman whom he introduced as his fiancée. A few days later, this woman brought to her two women, one of whom was named Hui.

As a result of what the woman Hui told her, witness gave her certain medicine. They then went to a hotel in Hennessy Road where the woman Hui paid her $200. Witness then returned home.

That day, the first accused visited her and asked her to return to the hotel the following day with some instruments. The next day they went to the hotel and after seeing the woman Hui, witness and the woman Hui left the hotel.

The first accused then asked witness about the "treatment", whereupon witness replied she had completed the "treatment" and gave first accused $40 or $50.

She said the money paid was in accordance with an arrangement made previously that she and the accused would cooperate together in abortion "tricks".

In May, this year, the second accused told her that he would introduce another woman who he said was a "family girl" and had very little money. He added that it had been a long time since she last paid them. She replied that she had to spend money on medicine. Ko said she still had to give them treatment free.

At this stage, Mr D'Alton rose to tell the Court that the evidence in regard to the second alleged incident in December tended to show the guilt of the accused of other offences—that of aiding and abetting abortion at the very least, and there was nothing to indicate that any sum of money had been demanded or collected from Keung as an inducement to refrain from carrying out the accused's duties, as laid down in the ordinance.

The evidence was that there had been an arrangement between the woman and the accused to share the money received for the performance of an illegal abortion and there was no indication whatsoever that the accused ever promised to refrain from prosecuting this offence. No evidence had been led to establish that this had anything to do with the charge of corruption. If anything was established, it was an entirely different offence.

Wrong Time

When called to reply, Insp. Apps asked whether this was a submission by the Defence Counsel of a case for the accused to answer in the midst of evidence. The time for objection was when the Prosecution had closed its case and not half-way through leading a witness in her examination-in-chief.

"Your Honour, can anybody produce any kind of authority that every element has got to be proved orally and the Court is not allowed to infer from the evidence to cover the element of the charge?" Insp. Apps asked.

Mr D'Alton: "I don't understand what's been said."

Judge Macfee observed that the evidence so far was that the accused had agreed to the woman's suggestion that they would introduce clients to her for the purpose of abortion. Whether this was the same as corruption was to be contested. Mr D'Alton said he was making an objection and not his closing address. There was a rule of law providing that the prosecution must not introduce evidence to show that the prisoner or the accused was guilty of an offence other than as charged "unless and until such evidence falls within certain specified exceptions."

Insp. Apps said that the Court had evidence that the accused were police officers. "Now, I haven't finished my case yet. I'll call evidence that they did not report when the offence became known to the accused. Every bit of evidence so far points to these charges. They may happen to have some elements of other offences, but all the evidence given points to these charges and the evidence is not finished yet."

All Along

Mr D'Alton said all along he had objected to this type of evidence being produced at all as it was an infringement of the rules of law. The accused were charged with corruption under Section 2 (1), in which they were alleged to have received money as an inducement or reward for forbearing to carry out their duties in respect of any transaction whatsoever. Looking through the whole of the evidence there was no part of evidence showing such an intent.

Insp. Apps said it was incumbent upon the accused to report as they were police officers. It was their duty to take action in regard to the offence.

Mr D'Alton asked if a Police officer who was engaged in smuggling would be charged with corruption. It might be said that the woman having been caught by the accused was in the accused's hands. "I would say they were in hers. She would tell them, 'You say a single word about this I'll... What about the first instance, what about the money you received?'"

As A Whole

Insp. Apps said the evidence as a whole must be examined. He said the evidence in regard to the first incident in July last year also related to the second incident and the present third charge.

There was an arrest and the woman had been threatened in the first incident. There was no need to arrest her and to frighten her in the second incident.

As to who was in whose hands, Insp. Apps continued, it was suggested that the two accused were in the woman's hands. There was no question of this at all as the penalty for the offence the woman had committed was much greater than that by the Police officers.

At this stage, Insp. Apps said he did appreciate that he was not qualified to argue on law. Legal submission had been put forward by the Defence who would produce further authorities to argue on the point. He asked them if the Court would grant an adjournment for Crown Counsel to answer the submission put forward by the Defence.

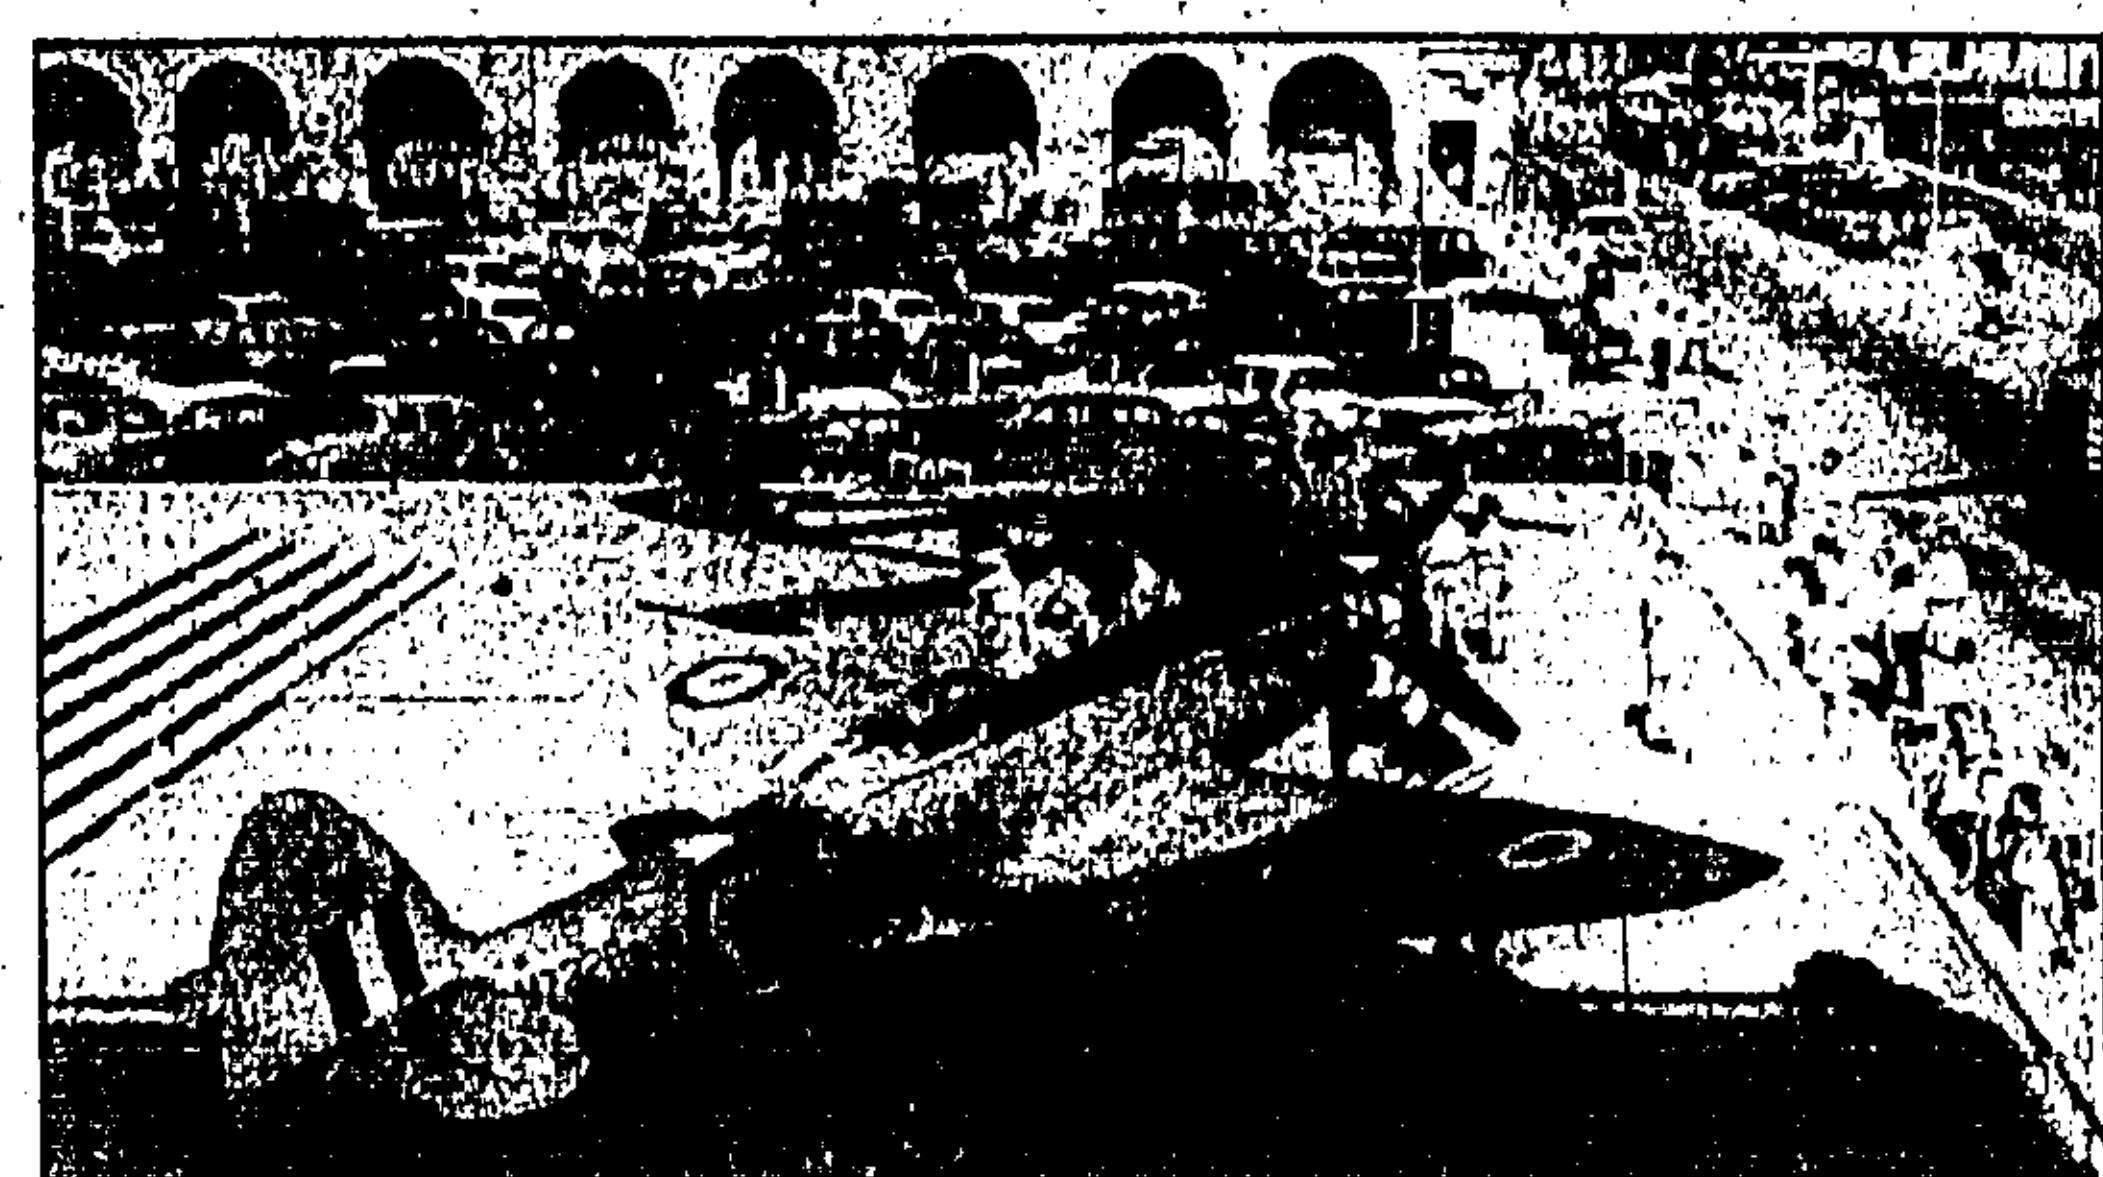

No Objection

Mr D'Alton said he could not object to Crown Counsel arguing on this point of law.

The objection he had raised was as a result of the Prosecution's case. "What I understand the argument is that if once a Police officer receives money and fails to report an offence, he is charged under Section 2 (1) (that of corruption), that is tantamount to say it is not necessary to prove the ingredients of the offence. I do not think that can be upheld. Further, as regards the contention that the first offence leads to the second offence, I would say that each count must prove against the accused."

Judge Macfee then adjourned the case.

Chinese Believed To Have Jumped Bail

San Francisco, Sept. 12. Federal Judge Oliver J. Carter today ordered a millionaire Chinese shipping financier, T. Y. Fong, to appear in court on September 30 to show cause why his US$50,000 bail should not be increased.

Fong is being sued by the Government for breach of contract in the sale of seven surplus ships which he purchased for scrap and later sold to China. The order was the first step in an attempt by the Government to seek forfeiture of Fong's bail. The Government believes Fong has left the country in violation of his bond and will not appear at the September 30 hearing.

Fong was arrested under a rare civil warrant last New Year's Eve in connection with the suit, in which the Government seeks US$3,486,000 in penalties.

Fong's home is Sao Paulo, Brazil, although he travels under a Nationalist Chinese passport. He is believed to be in London.—United Press.
